Background Information

Scenario 1 – Dodgy Facebook	Scenario 2 – Twitter Concerns
A friend of yours seems to automatically accept all friend requests on Facebook. You reckon there are at least a few dodgy people that they list as friends and you're concerned. One of their 'friends' is someone you've been warned about. You reckon it's a dodgy imposter, pretending to be a young teenage girl. You tell your friend but they tell you to get lost and mind your own business. What should you do next?	A friend of yours loves Twitter. A bit too much – they keep posting tweets about everything – where they're going, insults and comments about others. It is like they don't realise that other people can read what they're tweeting! You've spoken to them about it but they just don't get it. They reckon you're sticking your nose in where it isn't wanted. What should you do next?
Scenario 3 – IM Problems	Scenario 4 – Email Hassall
A friend chats all the time on IM. You and a group of others feel safe and secure and use it for all the current gossip. Your friend then invites others to join your chat. They start talking about stuff you don't like so you block them. Your friend tells you to grow up and get a life – but you feel uncomfortable – something feels wrong. What should you do?	You best friend starts getting dodgy emails on the school system. So much so that they stop using their school email account. They then start getting emails to their home account – nasty stuff about how they're 'going to get what's coming to them'. They block all the emails but keep getting more. You suggest reporting it, but they tell you not to worry and it'll be fine. What should you do?
